Comhairle nan Eilean Siar Archive Policy

1. Introduction

Tasglann nan Eilean is the archive service of Comhairle nan Eilean Siar. Its purpose is to identify, collect and permanently preserve:

- (i) the records of Comhairle nan Eilean Siar and its predecessor bodies which need to be retained permanently for legal or historical reasons;
- (ii) the archives of organisations, businesses, estates or individuals connected to the Outer Hebrides which have been gifted or deposited and to make these accessible to the widest extent possible for research, education or enjoyment.

2. Policy

The objectives of this Policy are to:

- Identify and select records of permanent historical value in line with Tasglann nan Eilean Collections Development Policy and statutory obligations as required by the Public Records (Scotland) Act 2011;
- take all necessary steps to ensure the preservation of the records;
- arrange, sort, and catalogue the records in order to maximise their value as an information resource using appropriate tools and adhering to recognised professional standards;
- ensure that information about the records is available to the community;
- publicise the archive and encourage use of the resources contained therein by the community for research, education and enjoyment;
- assist in the development of archival skills amongst community heritage groups throughout the Outer Hebrides.

3. Management and resource

3.1 The Comhairle is committed to providing sufficient resource to enable the archive service to fulfil its core purpose and objectives.

3.2 A professionally qualified archivist will be responsible for the management and preservation of the archives, as per nationally recognised Standards and Codes.

3.3 Achievement of the policy objectives shall be through the adoption of a number of related policies, procedures and plans that are compliant with best practice and professional standards.

4. Collections Development

Tasglann nan Eilean is the place of deposit for the records of the Comhairle and its predecessors, as well as the records of other public authorities such as Highland and Western Isles Valuation Joint Board and NHS Western Isles.

In addition it seeks to acquire other records of enduring value of individuals or organisations connected to the Outer Hebrides.

5. Collections Care and Preservation

All historical records entrusted to the care of Tasglann nan Eilean are managed to professional standards in order to preserve them for future generations.

The archives are stored in compliance with BS 5454 British Standard Recommendations for the the storage and exhibition of archival documents and in accordance with the Heritage Service Collections Care and Conservation Policy.

6. Collections Documentation

Archives are arranged, described and catalogued to recognised archival standards to preserve their evidential value. Catalogues describing the content of the archive are made available online to enable the community to discover the sources which are available.

Documentation plans are in place which reflect a strategic and systematic approach, to ensure that information about the collections is accessible to as wide an extent possible within available resource.

7. Access and Engagement

Archives will be made available for the use by researchers in conformity with Tasglann nan Eilean Access and Engagement Policy and nationally recognised Access standards, subject to any legislative requirements that may apply.

8. Records Management

The Archivist serves on the Records Management Working Group which has a remit to ensure a common approach to Records Management is developed across the Comhairle to facilitate compliance with all relevant record-keeping legislation, including the need to ensure that records of enduring value are selected and transferred to the archive service as required under the Public Records (Scotland) Act 2011.
